

What was agreed?

Number the cards in story order.

Raizy asks for Chani's folded private page afterward.

Chani talks with Mama without repeating Raizy's passage.

Raizy asks permission to read her own passage.

The girls use a fresh page for the agreed shared story.

Chani clarifies that finished or not, she will keep the page private.

Permission has a shape

Sort the cards. One consent does not silently establish another.

A clear limit, not a repair date

Compare the replies. Mark the one that says the actual limit. Rewrite one evasive reply without exposing page contents.

Care without a page trade

Draw a path through useful actions.

☐ Acknowledge that the reading was personal.

☐ Name the privacy limit clearly.

☐ Read the page to buy the laughter back.

☐ Keep the shared passage out of public stories.

☐ Ask about conditions before a future reading.

☐ Repeat her passage to show how unfair she was.

☐ Ask a trusted adult for support if pressure continues.

Before a private conversation

Use fictional people. Fill the fields without writing any actual private passage.

What is being offered?

What is requested in return, if anything?

A question before agreeing

What may be repeated and to whom?

A clear answer if the character declines

Who can help if pressure continues?

Private and shared

Choose a reminder for the fictional characters. Final stickers are 2 1/4-inch squares.

Parent notes and answers

Discussion questions:

What did Raizy ask before reading?

What request came afterward?

Why is unfinished not the actual answer?

How do the girls agree around their new shared page?

Parent tool: Listening can be kind without establishing a private-information trade. Help the teen state the real limit instead of inventing a repairable excuse. Keep another person's confidence while seeking proportionate adult support. This story has ordinary personal writing, not a safety concern. Privacy must not prevent prompt trusted-adult help when someone is unsafe.

1. Listed order 2, 4, 1, 5, 3.

2. Listening permitted; repeating and reciprocal disclosure not agreed; joint edits on agreed scene permitted.

3. Actual limit: I am keeping this page private, even when finished. Not finished explains a condition that may imply later sharing. No invented excuse required.

4. Useful: acknowledge, clarify, keep confidence, ask conditions first, get support for continued pressure. Not useful: reveal to buy laughter or repeat passage to prove unfairness.

5. Open. Example: Are you asking me to listen, or proposing an exchange? An exchange requires both people's free agreement and can be declined. Safety concerns go promptly to trusted adults; this story's ordinary writing creates none.

6. Open. Privacy is not secrecy that blocks needed safety help.

7. Open. Personal notebook stays closed. Shared fictional sheet may show umbrella shop names.
